

Adverb challenge

Can you put these seven adverbs somewhere in the text below?

Camels

The most distinctive feature of a camel is the hump, or humps, on its back. In these humps, camels store fat which is used as energy when they don't have access to food. They can put up with very difficult conditions, drinking only a little or no water for up to seven days. When they reach a place where they can drink, they soak up water like a sponge – they can drink 135 litres in 13 minutes! And their mouths are so tough that they can eat most types of plant.

Possible way of inserting the adverbs (other ways possible):

Not unexpectedly, the most distinctive feature of a camel is undoubtedly the hump, or humps, on its back. In these humps, camels basically store fat which is largely used as energy when they don't have access to food. They can put up with very difficult conditions, drinking only a little or virtually no water for up to roughly seven days. When they reach a place where they can drink, they soak up water like a sponge – they can drink 135 litres in 13 minutes! And their mouths are simply so tough that they can eat most types of plant.
